The important recognition is part of a broad project that sees Equita and Bocconi University collaborate together - for the seventh consecutive year - in order to stimulate the debate on structural elements of the market, development factors and possible solutions for growth of capital market.

This year's theme was the analysis of the recent dynamics of the Investment banking market in Europe, in order to identify current trends, possible future developments and the implications for businesses, intermediaries, regulators and policy makers.

The operations and the companies nominated for the Equita Prize were chosen considering those carried out in the period between 1 January 2019 and 31 December 2019. Among the other companies awarded in the same category, also Antares Vision and Pattern.
